

I am an Executive Headteacher with nearly 30 years of experience in education, including 15 years in senior leadership roles. Currently, I lead two primary schools in North Yorkshire as part of the Yorkshire Learning Trust. Throughout my career, I have been committed to improving educational outcomes and creating environments in which both pupils and staff can thrive.

My work has given me extensive experience in strategic leadership, school improvement, curriculum development, and staff development. Alongside my school leadership role, I also work with local teaching school hubs to deliver the National Professional Qualification (NPQ) programmes. Through this work, I support the development of current and aspiring school leaders, helping to build leadership capacity across the education system.

I am passionate about leadership development and believe strongly in the importance of investing in people to secure long-term improvements in schools. Ensuring that every child has access to a high-quality education is central to my professional values. I am particularly motivated by the opportunity to help schools prepare young people not only for academic success, but also for the wider opportunities and challenges they will face in their futures.

By serving as a governor, I hope to broaden my own understanding of secondary education while contributing my experience of school leadership. I aim to provide both support and constructive challenge to school leaders, helping to strengthen governance and contribute positively to the continued success and development of the school community.
